

SEVEN MORE SURVIVORS OF WALLA WALLA REACH SHORE

WOMAN DIES IN A LIFE-BOAT AND HER BODY IS THROWN INTO THE SEA.

EUREKA, Cal., Jan. 4.—Word has just reached here that a life boat from the wrecked steamer Walla Walla, containing seven persons, has landed safely in Big Freshwater Lagoon, 25 miles north of Trinidad.

A stage has been dispatched from Trinidad to return with the survivors. Eight other passengers who landed at Big Lagoon yesterday arrived at Trinidad late last night, among them being Second Officer Lupp, who was on watch at the time of the collision.

A life boat which left the Walla Walla with ten persons on board arrived at Trinidad with only nine, the wife of Revenue Officer Kotzschur of Tacoma having died on board, her body being thrown overboard.

NAMES OF THE SURVIVORS WHO WERE FOUND TODAY.

EUREKA, Cal., Jan. 4.—The following are the names of those who came ashore at Fresh Water Lagoon last evening. They are now at Trinidad. They will not arrive at Eureka in time to sail on the Pomona for San Francisco this afternoon:

H. Holmes, boatswain;
E. Johnson, sailor.
P. Naucott, mess boy.
Arthur Johnson, sailor.
J. O. Johnson, watchman.
G. Morrison, waiter.
Rudolph Nelson, sailor.

BOATS ARE CRUISING UP AND DOWN THE MENDOCINO COAST.

EUREKA, Cal., Jan. 4.—At 10 o'clock this morning nothing has been heard from any of the missing people of the ill-l-fated steamer Walla Walla. Tug boats from this port are cruising up and down the coast looking for possible survivors and the United States dispatch boat McCulloch from San Francisco is off this coast on the same errand.

ENGINEER CROSBY'S WIFE RESIDED HERE

The wife of George H. Crosby, chief engineer of the ill-fated steamer Walla Walla, who is now in suspense as to the fate of her husband, was formerly a resident of Oakland. She, as well as her husband, were well known by Judge Hall of this city and, in speaking of them, this morning, the judge said:

"Mrs. Crosby was the widow of Dr. Holbrook, who was a physician in the employ of the railroad at Tucson, Arizona. After the doctor's death which took place in Arizona, Mrs. Holbrook came to this city and resided on Magnolia street. That was eight years ago. Later, she went to San Francisco where she was married to Mr. Crosby.

"Engineer Crosby was a very manly man and one of the most genial men I ever knew. He was a man of great courage. He would stay by his duty as long as he could. As chief engineer he did not have active work to do, but simply to supervise. In case of danger, however, it became his duty to take active hold of the engines. If he has been lost, it is my impression that as soon as he saw that an accident had happened he went down with his post of duty and remained with the ship until it was too late."

WALLA WALLA SEAMAN RESIDES IN OAKLAND

William Kelleher, one of the crew of the Walla Walla, was also a resident of Oakland. He had spent the greater part of his life here. His home is at Seventh and Oak streets. He was for a time in the blacksmithing business with his father near the corner of Clay and Fifth streets.

Reports from Eureka show that Kelleher was one of the men who were brought ashore.

THE REVOLUTIONISTS HAVE BEEN LANDED.

WILLEMSTAD, Island of Curacao, Jan. 4.—The armed revolutionary steamer Liberator, formerly the British steamer Ban Riga, has, it is believed here, landed the expedition near Barcelona, Venezuela.

Advices received here from Caracas show that the Venezuelan government is without news of the movements of the Liberator.

About 1,500 partisans of General Riera, a Venezuelan revolutionary leader, are awaiting his arrival near Coro, Venezuela. When Riera arrives it is intended to set the country in a blaze of revolt. Six other bands of insurgents raised by General Fernandez Mendoza and others are under arms, but they are avoiding coming into contact with government troops until they receive reinforcements. The fact that the government's efforts to capture these bands have been without success is proof of the vitality of the movement.

The Venezuelan government, according to the advices from Caracas, is without money and is vainly trying to buy war supplies in New York.

It is further asserted that the employees of the government of Venezuela have been without pay for the last six months and that they are only awaiting an opportunity to take up with General Castro.

GOV. SHAW MEETS SECRETARY GAGE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—Governor Leslie M. Shaw of Iowa, who was in conference with Secretary Gage for about two hours today, going over affairs of the Treasury Department, and then left with the Secretary for the White House. It is said that he is to take charge of the Treasury Department on the 25th instant. He said he had not anticipated any changes in the official force here and did not know he would have occasion to consider such changes. He said he regretted exceedingly that Secretary Gage had decided to leave the Treasury Department.

PASSENGER TRAINS IN A COLLISION.

BAKERSFIELD, Cal., Jan. 4.—Meagre particulars have been received here of a wreck on the Santa Fe at Bardslow yesterday. The numbers of the train, nor the identity of the train crews cannot be learned but from information gleaned at the local Santa Fe office, two passenger trains, as the result of an open switch at that place collided, one of the engines being overturned and badly damaged. A barber on one of the trains sustained a fracture of the leg. The trains were running side by side on the double track at Bardslow. A connecting switch had been left open, and before the engineer could prevent his train turned sharply towards the opposite track and the crash occurred.

FOUR SECTION MEN INSTANTLY KILLED.

MONMOUTH, Ill., Jan. 4.—Four section men were instantly killed by a Burlington passenger train today. They were going to work on a hand car and the coming train was concealed by the steam of a freight train on a side track. The dead are: JAMES McGRATH, Foreman. JOSEPH BROWN. SAMUEL METTLER. MIKE ANDERSON.

THE FRENCH BARK MAX RAN DOWN WALLA WALLA

SEATTLE, Washington, Jan. 4.—The French bark Max reports being in collision with the steamship Walla Walla.

A special to the Times from Neah Bay says:

The steamer Wastenaw, which has just arrived, reports being in company with the French bark Max off Cape Mendocino, January 2. The Max reported being in collision with a large passenger steamer at 4 o'clock that morning.

The Max had three holes stove in her bow and her stem was bent to port but no lives were lost on the bark.

The Wastenaw offered to tow the Max to Puget Sound but the offer was refused as it was thought the vessel could be navigated to San Francisco. It is probable that the passenger steamer was the Walla Walla. The Max was bound for San Francisco in ballast.

WRONG SIGNAL CAUSE OF WRECK

Fast Express Runs Into a Slow Freight, Four Killed.

JOHNSTOWN, Penn., Jan. 4.—Because of a wrong signal at the Nineveh tower late last night the fast, east-bound Pennsylvania Mail and Express train No. 14 ran into a slow freight ahead, five miles west of this city, and a few minutes later a west-bound freight crashed into the wreck, causing the death of four persons and the serious injury of at least five others.

Train No. 14 got a clear block at the tower and running ahead at full speed crashed into the rear of extra freight No. 490, wrecking the engine and two cars of No. 14 and the caboose and two cars of the freight. West-bound No. 593 almost immediately piled into the debris, the engine and ten cars tumbling into the river. The dead: JAMES G. BLACK, engineer of 893, found dead in cab, perhaps drowned. FIREMAN WILLIAM PAUL, of Pittcairn, died in hospital from injuries. ROBERT S. NOLAN of Pitcairn, first brakeman. ENGINEER JAMES WINTERS of Pittsburgh, in charge of No. 14. The injured, it is thought, will all recover.

HAS LANDED THE SAILORS. LISBON, Jan. 4.—The Dutch steamer Aneia has landed here the crew of 27 men of the Italian Steamer Scipio which was burned at sea January 1st.

FORM A NEW CABINET. SOFIA, Jan. 4.—Prince Ferdinand has entrusted Dr. Danef, Minister of Foreign Affairs, with the task of forming a new Cabinet.

OAKLAND FORGING TO FRONT.

Auspicious is the opening of 1902 for Oakland. For several years past the city has been advancing—building and improving in a substantial way. This progressive movement has accelerated and gathered momentum as it proceeded, and last year it was a double quick march. The new year begins with the pace so far unchecked and increasing at a notable rate.

It is evident that not only Oakland, but the adjacent towns and all the surrounding country are going ahead rapidly. During the past twelve months four hundred buildings were erected in Oakland, seven-eighths of them being residences. Nearly as many more were erected in Berkeley, while the amount of building in Alameda was greater than for years past. The building boom has also touched Piedmont, Elmhurst, San Leandro and Hayward with its magic wand.

These are the outward and superficial signs of prosperous growth. But there is a deeper current which carries the real volume of which the increase in dwellings and retail houses is but a proof and portent. Shipping and manufacturing in Oakland have made remarkable advances during the past year. The water front is a scene of unexampled activity. From the Brooklyn Basin to the northern line of Berkeley there is busy life—the smoke of factories, the hum of machinery and the bustle of business.

Here is the spring of Oakland's growth, the basis of its prosperity in future. The beautiful residences being built on the heights and the cottages erected in the northern part of town germinate in the busy life along the water front. They are the outcrop of commercial and manufacturing expansion.

Oakland is no longer a bed-chamber for San Francisco. Many San Francisco business men live here, but this city has at last taken an independent position. It has an industrial and commercial life distinct and apart from the city across the bay. Its municipal stature has increased till it no longer stands in dependent attitude before its greater neighbor. It cannot now be classed as a part of the business menage of the metropolis. This does not imply that San Francisco has decreased in importance, but only proves that Oakland has increased in relative importance and has assumed an independent position so far as trade and industry are concerned.

San Francisco is destined to be one of the great cities of the world—the commercial capital of the Pacific—and Oakland is destined to be second only to her in wealth and population. Here will be the manufacturing center of the Pacific Coast. Its heart will be the harbor where great yards for building steel ships and mammoth works for smelting ores and working metals will be located.

In twenty years wharves will cover every foot of the harbor water front, and the harbor will be crowded with shipping from all parts of the world. Then Oakland Alameda, Berkeley, Piedmont, Emeryville, Fruitvale and Melrose will be built into one solid city. The accomplishment has already begun.

During 1901 a long stride was made toward it, and there is promise of a much longer stride in the new year.

We are growing faster than most real-estate. They are little acquainted, generally speaking, with the rapid increase in the manufacturing and mercantile establishments of this city and its immediate environs during the past year. They do not stop as a rule to inquire what has caused the erection of more than 1,000 houses in this district during the past year nor ask why rents have advanced in the face of this extraordinary amount of new building.

If they did they would learn that many new manufacturing plants have been erected, employing fully one thousand more hands; that more ships have entered the harbor than ever before; that more new ships have been built on its shores than in any previous year; that more firms are doing business in Oakland than at any previous time; that the trade is larger and more stable than it has ever been in the city's history. All these things tell the story of the common and related building up of the factory and water front districts as well as the purely residential sections.

If Congress grants the appropriation for deepening the harbor channel the end of 1902 will see Oakland's feet planted more firmly in the rock of permanent prosperity than ever before. If we can get that—which is ours in justice—this city can defy all adverse vicissitudes. But Oakland will go ahead without it. Her position is too strongly taken for any turning backward; the period of doubt and mistrust has passed, and the rapidity of future development now depends entirely upon the activity and enterprise of the inhabitants of this city.

GUILTY OF TREASON WHEN THEY SIGNED DOCUMENT.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—The War Department has received from the Philippines copies of a remarkable proclamation, signed with the names of nine Americans, seven of them stationed as being in the United States Military service, inviting American soldiers to desert and join the ranks of the Filipino soldiers. The text of the document is as follows:

"To whom it may concern: Dear Fellow Countrymen: After many months among the Filipino people, knowing their customs and character, we, the undersigned, have come to the conclusion that the time has arrived for us to break the silence and let you know the real truth, so that you will see the folly of continuation of fighting these people, who are defending their country against the cruel American invasion in the same manner as our forefathers did against England in those glorious days of our grand and noble liberator, General George Washington.

"Since the day we were led by our conscience and presented ourselves to the Philippine authorities, we have received the best of treatment and we are enjoying a life of luxury without having to put our lives in danger, as you do, who still remain in the American ranks, fighting for an unjust cause, which sooner or later must surely prove disastrous, as it did to the Spanish, notwithstanding that they knew the country and customs of the people better than the Americans do.

"For above mentioned reasons and also that the war may soon end, we ask the men of the American Army stationed in these islands, to present themselves to the Filipino authorities, as we did, therefore showing yourselves to be true Americans, upholding the policy of Washington and the Monroe Doctrine against the ambitious policy of President McKinley, who for two years has carried on this cruel war, spilling the innocent blood of thousands of American soldiers, and with what object?—to fill the pockets of Mark Hanna and several other American capitalists, who have been for years and are now ruling America today, or in other words, changing your blood for gold and robbing many a once happy home, breaking the heart of many a loving mother or wife, thereby making a once happy family sad.

"Before we close, let us tell you that rear every town are always stationed forces of Filipino troops to whom, should you so desire, you can present yourselves with or without your rifles and to avoid danger it is best to hide it in a secure place, and after you have presented yourself, inform the Filipino officer or Chief of Guerrillas and they will recover it and pay you some money in return.

"With this, we conclude, wishing you the best fortune. We remain,

Yours most sincerely,

THE TURF.

There has never been a season since racing began in California that has had such grumbling and "knocking" as the present racing season. First the handicappers and tipsters growled because the horses did not run one, two, three as they placed them. Accidents incident to large fields of race horses were marked "jobs," and horse owners and jockeys abused because the horses in their charge did not perform like pieces of machinery. The racing officials came in for their share of criticism because they did not take cognizance of imaginary wrongs and punish somebody for losing favorites.

Now the first choices are having a successful run, the tipsters rejoice with the successor their "handicaps," but the professional bettor grumbles and gets his name in print because he cannot get his money on at market prices. The bookmaker is now the target for the "knockers," and strangely enough, the people who do the most "knocking" are people who make a living out of the racing business.

The trouble with Charlie Ellison and bettors of his kind is that they expect to bet as much money on a horse here as they can in New York, where there are thousands of dollars of public money played as compared with nickels here. Willie Applegate came here with a large bank roll to his credit. It must be said he took the money, but at what cost? After accepting the money of the big players he found no public play for the other horses, and they ran for his book, which lost $20,000. Hugh Jones started a book at the beginning of the season with a five thousand dollar bank roll, and he took it to the money. Let anybody ask Jones what the bettors did to him. The answer will be, "They took me." Eight other books with bank rolls ranging from $5,000 to $50,000 have felt by the wayside since the season opened, and the bettors got the money. Frank Lauterman lost so much money "taking the money" that he is ashamed to tell the amount. It is one thing to stand on the ground and criticize bookmakers. It is quite another to get up on the block and place bets and keep your bank roll intact. The heavy bettors as a rule contribute nothing to the support of racing, not even to the extent of the price of admission. The bookmaker alone knows the extent of the price of admission, and he knows the price of admission. He must have a general public play. If he depends on the heavy bettors he is sure to lose because they know as much about the business as the bookmaker and have the advantage of playing when they desire, while the bettor is forced to take the play when it comes. Yesterday four well played favorites won and a few bookmakers who "took the money" will mingle with the heavy bettors on the ground this afternoon, but they will have little trouble "getting their money on," for the very simple reason that little is left out of their former bank rolls to bet. Florio, a dicky legged horse, was played to win in the last race as the race had been run and the bettors alone knew the winner. So far as the bookmakers were concerned it was like a case of wire tapping. The race was "in" for Florio, and the bookmakers were struggling behind him all the way as in each horse had three instead of four legs to run on.

There was at least one man at Emeryville yesterday who had nothing to grumble about. He cashed a combination ticket calling for El Mido, Saul of Tarsus, Huachuca, Byron Rose and Florio $7.00 to $5. Billy Sullivan, the noted handicapper was standing nearby when the gentleman pocketed his $35 for an investment of $15.00. He picked up carefully and thoughtfully Sullivan remarked: "That money will never see the race track again. If that fellow don't open a grocery store with it tomorrow, I'm a bad judge of human nature."

SAYS IT IS NOT A PIECE CLUB.

John Griffin Tells About Republican Organization.

EDITOR TRIBUNE—An obscure morning publication has printed a scurrilous article about the organization of the American Republican Club, intimating that it is a piece club. Why a regular Republican organization should have been singled out for such a brutal attack I cannot imagine.

As I am president of the American Club, I feel that some explanation of its aims and objects should be made in view of the scandalous insinuations published by the newspaper. I have alluded to. The American Club was organized by a number of young Republicans, mostly working men, for the purpose of participating in politics as members of the Republican party. None of us are politicians or officeholders, but just plain American citizens.

In order to make the club popular and draw a regular attendance we decided upon having some social features attached, which would tend to make the club a permanent organization.

We rented rooms at 710 Broadway from Heron & Holcomb, and are now fitting them up for occupancy. It will cost about $200 to fit the club up properly. As the members are generally workmen in moderate circumstances, this expense is too heavy for them to bear easily. We therefore solicited small contributions from a number of the Republican officeholders and prominent politicians to aid in furnishing and fixing up the rooms.

We have spent some money out of our own pockets. Out of this very useful proceeding the imputation is manufactured that the American organization is a piece club.

So far as Dr. N. K. Foster is concerned, he subscribed $5 when informed of the objects of the club and what the money was required for. He deferred payment, however, till a later date for personal reasons which he stated. Since the publication in the morning paper previously referred to, I called on Dr. Foster and he denied making any remarks derogatory to the club. He said he was called up by telephone and stated that he had been requested to subscribe and nothing beyond that.

I will state that it is our intention to become a uniformed marching club when the campaign opens, and in the meantime we wish to make the club rooms the scene of social gatherings, a place where the members can gather in the evening for amusement and recreation. We also propose to give entertainment to the members.

If all this savor of a piece club program, I am at a loss to know what the term piece club implies. Respectfully, JOHN GRIFFIN.

EXCELLENT PROGRESS IS MADE BY DIRIGO LODGE.

Excellent progress is being made by Dirigo Lodge, No. 24, Knights of Pythias. Never before in the history of the order have so many candidates been initiated in so short a time. Dirigo Lodge is composed almost entirely of young men of character and worth, thus forming a foundation for the now strongest lodge in the county.

Last Tuesday evening nine candidates were initiated into the order, and several were put through the square rule, in spite of the many amusements going on New Year's eve. Visitors were present from Idaho and Missouri and from Oakland and West Oakland Lodges in this city. Dirigo's members felt particularly happy in having with them a good meeting in the first term their loyal and true friend, District Deputy Sloan.

Next Tuesday evening Dirigo will tender to its members one of its old time banquets to which all K. P.'s are invited to attend without further notice. Grand Chancellor Childs will be present, and a good time is assured all who come.

Free trial packages of a most remarkable remedy are being mailed to all who will write the State Medical Institute. They cured so many men who had battled for years against the mental and physical suffering of lost manhood that the Institute has decided to distribute free trial packages to all who write. It is a home treatment, and all men who suffer with any form of sexual weakness resulting from youthful folly, premature loss of strength and memory, weak back, varicocele or emaciation of parts can now cure themselves at home.

The remedy has a peculiarly grateful effect of warmth and seems to act directly to the desired location, giving strength and development just where it is needed. It cures all the ills and troubles that result from years of misuse of the natural functions and has been an absolute success in all cases. A request to the State Medical Institute, 686 Eleventh Street, St. Wayne, Ind., stating what you desire one of their free trial packages, will be complied with promptly. The Institute is desirous of reaching that great class of men who are unable to leave home to be treated, and the free sample will enable them to see how easy it is to be cured of sexual weakness when the proper remedies are employed. The Institute makes no return, and no man who writes will be sent a free sample, who properly filled in a plain package so that its recipient need have no fear of embarrassment or publicity. Readers are requested to write without delay.

A SIGNIFICANT COMPARISON.

When John Bull compares his balance sheet for the past year with that of Uncle Sam he heaves a lugubrious sigh and laments over the decadence of British trade and the decline of British influence generally. As a fact, however, England's trade was never greater than now. But the trouble is that the shadow of the United States is falling over the United Kingdom. France and Germany have increased their trade and manufacturing output, also, but America is outstripping them all so fast that the relative showing is bad for them as well as for Great Britain.

The English recognize that they must soon surrender the unquestioned supremacy they have so long held as a commercial and manufacturing nation. She has reached the limit of her coal and iron production; cotton manufacturing is at a standstill, and wool manufacturing has ceased to expand. Cheaper fuel and better transportation facilities in the United States, together with more scientific industrial methods and more thorough organization for the assembling of materials are bringing about their logical result. The United States is to take the first place in the commercial world, and this means that the financial center will shift to this country.

This does not mean the downfall of England, but the conditions portend that a gradual retrograde will begin in Great Britain before many decades pass. Her productive capacity is not now keeping pace with the increase in population, and the pressure of competition is bearing more heavily on the energies and profits of the people year by year with the gradual exhaustion of her coal supply, there must naturally come a drifting away of business and a disintegrating of her industrial system. This system is based upon transporting raw materials to the fuel and the workers and then transporting the finished product to the markets. Our system is based upon a directly opposite principle. Here the idea is to transport the fuel and the workers to the raw material, which is a great saving in energy. Great Britain still holds unchallenged the first place as a maritime nation, but the indications are that the United States will attack her in that citadel as she successfully did once before.

It is such reflections as these that makes John Bull grow sad and gloomy as he compares his balance sheet with Uncle Sam's.

PEACE FOR PROFIT.

It looks as if the creditors of Chile and Argentina had interfered to prevent those two cocky, but impetuous powers going to war. This reminds one of the old story current some years ago on the European bourses. Rumors of war were flying thick through the newspapers, and a wealthy capitalist interested in national securities asked Baron James Rothschild if there was really going to be war.

"The House of Hapsburg wants to go to war, but the House of Rothschild does not," replied the banker drily.

There was no war. The enormous expense to England of the Boer war has made the money leaders of the world leechy alive to the financial dangers attending modern warfare. It costs money to go to war nowadays, and nations like Chile and Argentina are compelled to secure financial accommodation before entering a fight. Instead of getting the desired accommodation, financial pressure of the severest kind was brought to bear to compel an adjustment without recourse to arms. While this was done purely to protect property interests, it must be admitted that the cause of humanity and peace has been well served. Modern finance is distinctly opposed to war, which emphasizes the fact that war is not only barbarous, but a violation of the fundamental law of economics.

A GOOD SHOWING.

Uncle Sam begins the New Year with a prosperous financial showing. There is a large surplus in the treasury and the receipts are largely in excess of expenditures, either present or prospective. The bank clearings for the past year increased over 58 per cent over 1900 and the net earnings of railroads increased about 20 per cent. Equally good reports come from the manufacturing industry. The agricultural industry is in an exceptionally prosperous condition. Thus the four great factors of national prosperity are keeping pace with each other, which shows that this country is advancing on an even keel along a sure course. The only undeveloped factor of commercial greatness is our merchant marine, but even this has shown a striking advance and the signs of the times indicate that the United States is preparing to resume a commanding place among maritime nations.

INHUMAN COWARDICE.

The inhumanity of the dastards aboard the bark that sunk the Walla Walla is a hissing reproach to the French name and character. They refused to answer the cries for help, but sailed away leaving the passengers and crew of the sinking steamer to struggle with the icy water as best they could. Such atrocious conduct argues that the collision was the result of carelessness on the part of the bark's crew. Very likely the bark did not stay to render assistance because of a desire to avoid identification. This is the most charitable view that can be taken, but even that convicts the bark's officers of being heartless wretches who deserve the contempt of all mankind.

The conduct of the officers and crew of the Walla Walla presents a shining contrast that is worthy of the American sailor. They behaved with coolness and courage, and exerted themselves to the utmost to save the lives of the passengers. The loss of life was due to the swamping of boats and not to any deterioration on the part of the crew. The regret that some of the crew went down with the ship is tempered by pride in their heroic regard for duty. They died like men, which is better than living like cold-blooded cowards.

Some of the Southern Bourbons are having spasms again. President Roosevelt went hunting in Virginia and ate some lunch in a negro's cabin.

SUED BY A CHURCH.

Cooper's African Episcopal Zion Church is plaintiff in an action against D. R. Young, a carpenter, to secure $299.00 damages. In the complaint the plaintiff alleges that Young was paid $60 to repair the church roof and that the work was so poorly executed that the recent rains have penetrated the same and damaged the walls and floor of the building to the extent of $299.00. The suit was brought in Judge Stetson's court.

THE MEN OF OAKLAND.

Says They Ought to Find Amusement About Their Home—It is Not Enough to Pay the Bills.

The average man is the very personification of helplessness around the house. Reading aside, he has no resources within himself to occupy the hours spent in the privacy of his own home.

He has few interests in common with his family, and is apt to think he has amply fulfilled his part of the work when he provides money for running expenses. The children bother him, and if they ask him questions are apt to get answers so short that they are not often tempted to renew the experiment, and finally cease asking him anything at all. So they grow up comparative strangers to his real character, while he in turn has little or no insight into the deeper feelings of his own offspring.

If his wife approaches him with a few words about the domestic affairs he immediately says he is pestered to death, and shows signs of beating a hasty retreat to the club or theater, and if she doesn't consult him, and domestic matters are forced upon his attention through some other channel, he immediately begins to complain of the lack of consideration shown him, and says she regards him as a mere figure head. Then, when one accord they let him alone in a domestic way, he either does one of two things—puts on his hat and goes away to be amused, or straightway proceeds to fall asleep.

For some reason or other, when business is over, men expect to be amused, and having nothing within themselves, look to somebody else to provide them with the amount of pleasure necessary.

It is so from the cradle up. They are not taught, as boys, that it is a necessity for them to add to the world's pleasure, just as much as it is due a woman. No, all that is left to the gender sex exclusively, and right royally it is attended to, but it is hardly fair to expect the wife and mother always to provide amusement for the master of the house.

Women have a thousand and one little things to amuse themselves with at home, outside of purely routine affairs. For instance, most of them know more or less about music, and turn to it instinctively during leisure moments; many others sketch or paint; others are fond of flowers, and if they haven't a garden, will make the house beautiful with potted plants; again a bird will give pleasure, and there is always needlework, which in spite of all that has been said to the contrary, has never lost its charm for womankind. So it will be seen that when women are tired of reading they have plenty of accomplishments within themselves to fall back upon.

AN OLD GALINDO WILL NOW BEING SOUGHT.

S. Galindo died twenty-eight years ago in San Leandro and left a comfortable estate among his widow and fifteen children.

Today a portion of the estate is a lot in Pittsburg, which one of the owners, Mrs. Arada, a daughter of Galindo, wants to sell.

Judge Ogden questioned the woman closely and elicited the information that she thought her father had left a will, but it was so long ago that she could not remember it.

Attorney Tappan stated that no such will had been filed.

The Court, however, thought it best to have more light on the question of the ancient will and continued the case for a week, during which time a search will be made for the document.

TYPHOID AT CHILDREN'S HOME.

Little Ones Have Gone Through a Siege of Diphtheria.

A case of typhoid fever at the Children's Home on Forty-fifth street, near Telegraph avenue, has been reported to the Board of Health. What gives this case especial significance is the fact that fourteen cases of diphtheria were reported at the home during December.

Fortunately none terminated fatally, which reflects credit on the skill of Dr. J. C. S. Akery, the Home physician.

But the numerous cases of zymotic disease reported at the Home lately has raised the suspicion that something is wrong with the sanitary arrangements. The Sanitary Inspector will probably make a thorough inspection of the premises in a day or two and ascertain if possible if there is any local cause why zymotic diseases should be prevalent out there.

Dr. Edward von Adelung, the Health Officer, said he had not visited the Children's Home because it was under the charge of a competent physician and he felt as if an unsolicited visit might be taken as a reflection on the physician in charge. "If there is anything wrong with the sanitary arrangements," he said, "the Inspector of the Health Office will find it out and report the fact."

The Children's Home is recognized as a well managed institution that has done a great deal of good. It is controlled by the Ladies' Relief Society, of which Mrs. J. E. McElvath is president. Miss M. Sheppard is matron. In view of the deep personal interest taken in the home by a number of prominent society ladies leads to the belief that the appearance of diphtheria and typhoid there is due to special cause not yet discovered, for any prevalent cause within their knowledge would have been promptly abated.

DEEDS TO AVOID JUDGMENT.

C. B. White, assignee in the bankruptcy of Joseph C. Colderia, has filed an amended complaint against Colderia and several others, among them the wife of Colderia, Joseph King, F. J. Lenos and J. B. Maldonado.

The petitioner shows that after Colderia had begun insolvency proceedings in May, 1901, Johanna Albertson sued him for breach of promise and secured judgment in the sum of $5,385.00.

He further shows that at that time Colderia owned and has since owned twenty-six acres of land in Eden Township and conveyed away this property to L. B. Colderia and others, for the purpose of escaping the payment of the judgment rendered against him.

White sues to have the title to the property shown to be in Colderia.

DID KROGH HAVE MONEY IN THE BANK?

In the matter of the estate of Frederick Krogh, Judge Ogden has issued an order requesting the German Savings Bank of San Francisco, to disclose to the attorneys in the case the condition of the account of Krogh, if such an account exists, and if not, to have them appear in Court Monday next to testify in the premises.

PLANT IS TRANSFERRED TO SUBURBAN COMPANY.

Today deeds were filed of record transferring the title of the electric light plant at Haywards, heretofore in the name of D. Chisholm and others, to the Suburban Electric Company. These were in accordance with the purchase made of the plant which was announced in TRIBUNE a few days ago.

AN OLD GALINDO WILL NOW BEING SOUGHT.

S. Galindo died twenty-eight years ago in San Leandro and left a comfortable estate among his widow and fifteen children.

Today a portion of the estate is a lot in Pittsburg, which one of the owners, Mrs. Arada, a daughter of Galindo, wants to sell.

Judge Ogden questioned the woman closely and elicited the information that she thought her father had left a will, but it was so long ago that she could not remember it.

Attorney Tappan stated that no such will had been filed.

The Court, however, thought it best to have more light on the question of the ancient will and continued the case for a week, during which time a search will be made for the document.

TYPHOID AT CHILDREN'S HOME.

Little Ones Have Gone Through a Siege of Diphtheria.

A case of typhoid fever at the Children's Home on Forty-fifth street, near Telegraph avenue, has been reported to the Board of Health. What gives this case especial significance is the fact that fourteen cases of diphtheria were reported at the home during December.

Fortunately none terminated fatally, which reflects credit on the skill of Dr. J. C. S. Akery, the Home physician.

But the numerous cases of zymotic disease reported at the Home lately has raised the suspicion that something is wrong with the sanitary arrangements. The Sanitary Inspector will probably make a thorough inspection of the premises in a day or two and ascertain if possible if there is any local cause why zymotic diseases should be prevalent out there.

Dr. Edward von Adelung, the Health Officer, said he had not visited the Children's Home because it was under the charge of a competent physician and he felt as if an unsolicited visit might be taken as a reflection on the physician in charge. "If there is anything wrong with the sanitary arrangements," he said, "the Inspector of the Health Office will find it out and report the fact."

The Children's Home is recognized as a well managed institution that has done a great deal of good. It is controlled by the Ladies' Relief Society, of which Mrs. J. E. McElvath is president. Miss M. Sheppard is matron. In view of the deep personal interest taken in the home by a number of prominent society ladies leads to the belief that the appearance of diphtheria and typhoid there is due to special cause not yet discovered, for any prevalent cause within their knowledge would have been promptly abated.

DEEDS TO AVOID JUDGMENT.

C. B. White, assignee in the bankruptcy of Joseph C. Colderia, has filed an amended complaint against Colderia and several others, among them the wife of Colderia, Joseph King, F. J. Lenos and J. B. Maldonado.

The petitioner shows that after Colderia had begun insolvency proceedings in May, 1901, Johanna Albertson sued him for breach of promise and secured judgment in the sum of $5,385.00.

He further shows that at that time Colderia owned and has since owned twenty-six acres of land in Eden Township and conveyed away this property to L. B. Colderia and others, for the purpose of escaping the payment of the judgment rendered against him.

White sues to have the title to the property shown to be in Colderia.

Interesting Social Happenings Recorded for the Week—A Little Story on Attorney D. M. Delmas.

The important bit of news of the week is the announcement of the engagement of Miss Carmen Moore, second daughter of A. A. Moore to Walter A. Starr, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Starr of Oakland. The young people were college friends. I believe, having been graduated from the University of California in the same class—another proof of Professor Bacon's assertion that if you want men and women to hate each other all you have to do is to educate them. These young people detest each other so thoroughly that they are about to be married. The engagement was first whispered at a tea, but was later announced formally by Mr. and Mrs. Moore and everybody is delighted. I do not know Mr. Starr but he is DEKE said to be a charming fellow. Miss Moore is a very delightful girl, popular socially, cultured and interesting. The marriage will not take place for some months, they say, and in the meantime the Moores have come back to their lovely home on East Oakland Heights, though they are so wedded to San Francisco life that they purpose to move across the bay as soon as they can dispose satisfactorily of their home.

The event of the week was Miss Irene Baker's wedding on New Year's Day. Except for Katharine Harbub wife, I think, holds the palm. Miss Baker was the prettiest bride I have ever seen. She was really lovely in her wedding gown. Old St. Paul's was beautiful that warm New Year's afternoon and there were some pretty little details about the bride's dresses which had been kept a secret to the last moment—who says half a dozen girls cannot keep a secret? The bridesmaids' dresses were particularly lovely, being in pink chiffon over pink silk and as the entire gowns were accented in pink, they were big, pink chiffon hats with long plumes and their elbow-sleeves were not by long gloves. But the prettiest thing of all was that, instead of flowers, these up-to-date bridal attendants carried pink chiffon muffs—just the daintiest trifles you ever saw and exceedingly chic. They kept their fingers in them, too, and the innovation was a very cunning one for a winter wedding.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Harry Baker, wore a beautiful all-over lace gown over pink and, as I said before, the bride was stunning. The attendants are anticipating some merry times at the house party in San Jose which is to be given to them and at the big receptions and dinners which will greet Dr. and Mrs. Grissom on their return from their honeymoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dieckman, formerly Josephine Chabot, are having a beautiful trip abroad. They have been in London, Paris, and are now about starting on a tour of the continent. No date is mentioned as yet for their return.

On December 31st at half-past five in the afternoon, a quiet wedding took place at St. Mary's Cathedral across the bay. On that day, Miss Emma Murray, for many years a resident of East Oakland, and Fred G. Will of San Francisco were married. No one was present at the ceremony except a very few of the nearest relatives and there was no reception afterward on account of a recent death in the bride's family. The bride wore a traveling gown of tan cloth and after the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Will left for a few days' absence from the city. After a few weeks at the California Hotel they will take up their permanent home at the family residence of the Wills on Van Ness avenue.

Miss Murray has made her home for a number of years with her sister, Mrs. P. J. Kenna. In Thirteenth avenue, East Oakland, and though little older than her interesting nieces, was sometimes the chaperon of Miss Blix Smith, now Mrs. Hammer, and the fascinating Misses Kenna. Mr. Will is well known across the bay. He is in the employ of the Market Street Railway Company and is the son of P. G. Will, a retired capitalist. His sister is Mrs. James Stewart, who lives at the Granada.

Another wedding which is shortly to take place at St. Paul's is that of Miss Cora Louise Evans, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tallieson Evans, to Mr. Harry Gillette Holabird of Los Angeles. I have not heard who the bridesmaids are to be, but I presume that Miss Craig will be one of them and certainly Miss Evans' pretty younger sister will officiate in that capacity. The marriage is set for the evening of January fifteenth at half past eight o'clock.

The Evans girls are great housekeepers, brought up in the good old way, to know how to keep a house. They are exceedingly clever amateur milliners and dressmakers and have many womanly accomplishments possessed by few girls in these latter days. They have been bred for home-keepers, but are so witty and clever besides, and do not lack for the lighter accomplishments. There are four daughters.

Berkeley has been rather gay during the past week with teas, evening parties and elaborate dinners. Among the latter were two given by Mr. and Mrs. Philip R. Boone at their home, 2929 Durant avenue. Fourteen covers were laid for one and eighteen for the other. The decorations in red were appropriate for the season, and were arranged with artistic effect by the hostess.

Cards are out for a good many teas. Miss Bennet will be at home from three to five on the afternoon of January seventeenth at her home at Oak and Sixth streets.

was the host and all the Jackson street children were there while the Mosely home on Madison street overflowed with childish voices and laughter. The Adams children, the Bliss babies, the Little Magees were all among the guests and pink sashes and blue, white frocks and buff, hair shingled in the cute new way that is so very old, made up a charming sight. There was a dainty little spread.

One of the pretty weddings of the week was that of Miss Elizabeth Kinsey and Melville Dozier, Jr. which took place at the Methodist Church New Year's night. Miss Kinsey made a charming bride. She is one of the most popular young ladies in Oakland society.

There was very little old fashioned new year's calling in Oakland on Wednesday nor was there much across the bay. However hard the faddists may try to start it in the East it does not seem to take hold in the West at all. Nearly everyone went to the Baker wedding on New Year's Day and the Butters kept open house at Piedmont, as did the Bendels in the good, hospitable German ways. A few clergymen made new year calls, but the fashionables were "not at home" nor were their men seen on the streets. Arbor Villa was closed this year—in fact, Mrs. Smith has done scarcely any entertaining since her return, with the exception of a few very small dinners. The precarious health of Mrs. Thompson, Mrs. Smith's mother, is given as the reason. It is impossible to tell two weeks ahead how Mrs. Thompson's health will be, which precludes the possibility of any formal invitations being sent out.

It is really too funny for anything but one of the clubs in the city has had quite a ruction over D. M. Delmas. It seems that the program committee invited him to speak on the "Legal Rights of Women" and some of the virtuous husbands of these fair dames objected on the score that he was not a proper man, forsooth. The real objection I guess, was because Mr. Delmas is one of the most fascinating of gentlemen and these stupid old husbands were afraid, I guess. But, really, how stupidly silly is this persecution of a brainy man, and in this case, I'm happy to say, the persecution does not come from women. Delmas has the misfortune to have been found out, but he is not different from other men of his fortune and station in life. Besides he has been bitterly punished. He is at the head of the San Francisco bar so far as brains and ability go and as such should be honored. He will speak on the "Legal Rights of Women." As he is an equal suffragist I honor him much.

Mary Manning is to be in Oakland on Monday night, and possibly Tuesday. It will be a rare treat to have a good play at the Macdonough. Monday afternoon Miss Manning will probably be entertained at the Hinckleys in Fruitvale at tea or by Mrs. Lucile May Hayes in her bewitching bungalow. Miss Manning, who is Mrs. Hackett in private life, was entertained by the Hinckleys when she was here before. On that occasion she was accompanied by Mr. Hackett. It was announced, I remember, that they were engaged, but as a matter of fact they had been married for some months.

A memorial service was held for John J. Valentine in the Church of the Advent last Sunday. I was there and was devout, too, for in the death of Mr. Valentine Oakland has lost one of her very best citizens and the country as well. Really, how much it means when a man is able to go against his own financial interests for the sake of his citizenship. Mr. Valentine did that and he is almost the only man I know who did. He was a sincerely upright and honorable man and everyone who knew him honored him for his sterling character and the uprightness of his character. He was always for what was just and right and no motives of policy or diplomatic shilly-shallying ever obscured his mind. His death was a thousand pities. He should have been spared many years.

In the program of the various sessions of the California State of Federation of Women's Clubs to be held at Golden Gate Hall in February, the Oakland women loom up quite well though all sections of the State are of course represented. Mrs. Kate Bulkley of the Ebell is the chairman of the program committee, and Mrs. James Goewey of San Francisco of the music committee. Among Mrs. Bulkley's appointees are Miss Mabel Thayer Gray who will make an address on "American Literary Women of a Past Day," Miss Mabel Clare Craft and Miss Jessie Watson who are down for a discussion of the property rights of women and Mrs. Haight of Berkeley who is down for an address on the color question. Mrs. John Russ is the vice-president of Alameda District and as such will make a report of the work of the clubs on our side of the bay. The women expect a big uplift from the Federation's meetings here and probably quite a thousand women will attend. It should be interesting, especially as it is really preliminary to the General Federation of Women's Clubs which meets in Los Angeles in May.

Just now it does not occur to me that I have a burning desire to tell you anything else, so I'll say goodbye before my welcome is quite worn threadbare. Through fair weather or foul, old

PRETTY WEDDING OF MISS KINSEY AND MR. DOZIER.

The marriage of Miss Elizabeth Kinsey and Melville Dozier, Jr., which took place at the First Methodist Church Wednesday evening was a beautiful and impressive ceremony. The Rev. Dr. E. R. Dille was the officiating clergyman and his eloquent and profound remarks in the introduction of the ceremony were a reverent poem.

The marriage vows were said at the chancel, which had all the appearance of a miniature forest of green foliage. Miss Beulah George, with bird-like delivery, sang a most appropriate song, "I Cannot Help Loving Thee," while the assembled guests were waiting the arrival of the bridal party. When the principals were seen slowly approaching the altar rail, a hush of admiration stifled the scene as it was observed that the bride had appeared. She was charming in a dainty gown of white French batiste over white tulle, elaborately trimmed with tiny ruffles and lace insertion. The long tulle veil was held in place with the groom's gift, a star-shaped pin of diamonds, pearls and opals. St. Joseph lilies formed the bridal bouquet.

Miss Marian Miller was the maid of honor and the bridesmaids were: Miss Geraldine Scupham, Miss Edith Larkey, Miss Mabelle Haven and Miss Ruth Morse.

Miss Miller was in white, her gown being of point d'esprit and satin ribbon. She carried a long spray of asparagus fern. The bridesmaids were gowned alike in pale green organdie and carried white chrysanthemums. Short bridesmaid veils were also worn with pretty effect. The young ladies presented a charming appearance.

The groom was attended by his best man, Everett Brown, and the ushers were: Frank Kinsey, Seth Talcott, Dr. Colegrove and Fred Parks. After the wedding a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents on Twenty-fifth street, which was ornate in white and green. Miss Kinsey is PRETTY WEDDING OF MISS BOEK AND TIMOTHY DORGAN.

One of the prettiest marriages of the season was that which united Miss May Josephine Boek and Timothy Dorgan in the bonds of wedlock. The evening of the first day of the new year was selected as the time for inaugurating the happy companionship, and will long remain memorable among those who witnessed the pretty marital ceremony which signalized the occasion.

The ceremony was performed in St. Francis de Sales Catholic Church, than which there are few better appointed places for the performance of such a ceremony on the Coast. The interior is well lighted, the aisles are wide, and a perfect view may be had of the principals while the ceremony is in progress.

On the night in question the church was filled to its utmost and the marble altar was ablaze with lighted tapers. The approach of the bridal party was announced by joyous strains of the organ intoning Mendelssohn's "Wedding March."

The party moved at a stately pace up the main aisle on either side of which was a wall of eager, expectant and radiant faces. They were in rhythmic movement with the overture. In the advance were the ushers, marching in twos, namely, Dr. J. Purves, Frank J. Boek, a brother of the bride; J. Needham, Thomas Moran, Wm. J. Maguire and O. H. LaValiere.

These were followed by the bridesmaid, Miss Grace Kohlman.

Then came the bride, gracefully resting upon the arm of her brother, Charles Boek.

The party formed in front of the entrance to the sanctuary, where the best man, Louis Kennedy, joined the bridesmaid and the groom, Timothy Dorgan, took his place beside the bride.

The symbolic ceremony of giving away the bride was feelingly performed by Charles Boek, a brother of the bride. After the betrothal, the marriage years or new, you'll know that however much my personality may change, my name will always be still your MEDDLER.

On Tuesday evening Miss Ruth Cheever Morse gave a dinner at the home of her sister, Mrs. Henry A. Melvin, 1467 Tenth avenue, East Oakland. The affair was in honor of Miss Elizabeth Kinsey and Mr. Melville Dozier Jr., who were married on New Year's day, and the guests were those who on the following evening made up the bridal party.

Dinner was laid for twelve guests and the decorations of the dining-room and round-table were in red. The gas was shaded with red. A huge bowl of red material descended from the chandelier. The bon-bon receptacles at the places of the guests were in the same color. A ribbon of red was disposed around the table. "Fairy lamps," with red shades were in abundance on the table and a mammoth red ribbon tied in a "true-lover's knot" bound together the chairs which were occupied by the prospective bride and groom.

As nearly all of the gentlemen at the dinner were graduates of the University of California the prevailing hue of red was relieved by a blue and gold banner bearing the letters "U. C." which was attached to the chairs in which Miss Kinsey and Mr. Dozier sat. Smilax was also used abundantly in the decorations and the general effect was very artistic.

After dinner the evening was devoted to music and jollity and the New Year was ushered in with true University spirit by a "U. C. yell" that would have done credit to a victorious football team.

POLYTECHNIC'S FIRST BALL.

The first grand ball given by the Alumni Association of the Polytechnic Business College took place New Year's Eve at Masonic Temple and was a large and enjoyable affair. The temple was beautifully decorated in the colors of the college and the old year was danced out to merry trippings and dreamful music. One of the features of the happy evening was the introduction of the latest dance, the "Petsovit," a movement, the character of which can be discovered by spelling the name backwards.

The successful function was in the charge of the following members of the Association:

Committee of Arrangements—M. H. Weed, E. D. Liddell, H. Barnett, Miss Mabel Fassel, Miss Estelle Steen.

Reception Committee—Chas. A. Strong, Sidney M. Camp, Will Berovich, E. D. Liddell, Frank Rittgstein, Miss Minnie Lowry, Miss Grace Luck, Miss Winnifred Kady, Miss Maude Stevens, Miss Hattie Wicker.

Finer Committee—M. H. Weed, Manager; Arthur Jenkins, first assistant; H. Barnett, second assistant.

LONG HOLIDAY PARTY.

One of the most enjoyable parties of the holiday week was the one given by Miss Josephine L. Long to her numerous friends. The affair took place at Miss Long's home in West Oakland and the many guests were entertained by an excellent musical program and dainty supper.

The O'Brien Sisters Orchestra rendered entrancing airs throughout the evening. The vocal solos were given by Miss Bertha King, Miss Rose Turner, Miss Josephine L. Long and Mr. James McVey. Among those present were: Miss M. Brannin, Misses Lillie and Rose Turner, Misses Belle and Emma King, Miss G. Vuif, Miss M. Wrede, Miss Evelyn Long, Mr. and Mrs. W. Long, Mrs. Turner, Mrs. Wardle Pelton, the Messrs. H. J. Smyth, James McVey, George Lamb, Wardle Pelton, Charles Long, George Long, Albert Long, Jack Turner, Claude Sheldon and Jack Sheldon.

BALL AT SAN LEANDRO.

On New Year's Eve at San Leandro the Foresters of that place gave a ball at the U. P. E. C. Hall. The affair lasted until after 12 o'clock, it being the intention of the dancers to see the new year in. The hall was one mass of green and red arranged by a special committee on decorations. Lunch was served between dances.

DANCE AT ELMHURST.

An entertainment and dance was given at Red Men's Hall, Elmhurst, on New Year's Eve by the members of Comanche Tribe No. 79, Improved Order of Red Men. The affair consisted of a program of musical and literary numbers given by members of the order. The program was a great success and each number brought forth rounds of applause from the large and appreciative audience. After the program had been rendered refreshments followed. The balance of the evening was then spent in dancing and a social time. The members of the order are greatly pleased over the success of the affair, which was largely due to the efficient work of a special committee consisting of M. S. Snow, J. G. Skelley and August Carlson. The hall was crowded and all who were present reported having a good time.

BALL AT HAYWARDS.

The grand ball given at Haywards by the Native Sons and Daughters on New Year's Eve was the most brilliant affair of the season. Native Son's Hall, where the dance was given, was beautifully decorated for the occasion with evergreens and Christmas berries arranged among the hundreds of incandescent lights. The Sons and Daughters' dance practically ends the social affairs of the season. The great success of the ball was largely due to the work of the several committees from both orders who had been preparing for the social for some time past.

BENNET RECEPTION.

An interesting event in society circles will be the informal "at home" to be given by Miss Elsie Bennet on Friday, January 17th at her home on Oak street. Miss Bennet will receive her friends from 3 to 5 and a large number of guests are expected to be present as many invitations have been sent out to people on both sides of the bay. Miss Bennet will be assisted in receiving her guests by her cousins, Mrs. Thomas Williams, Jr. and Miss Muriel Steele, and by Miss Taylor of San Francisco, Miss Kate Clement, Miss Marietta Haines, Mr. Stanley H. Jackson, Miss Grace Sanborn, Mrs.

Harry East Miller, Miss Agnes Duff, Miss Nina Ingalls Dyer of Alvarado, and Miss Evelyn Hussey (although Miss Hussey is not yet out). Miss Bennet will also be assisted by Mrs. Hilkey, who has been in mourning for some months past, and who will preside at the table.

DORIS BORNEHANN'S PARTY.

One of the most charming of the many holiday affairs was the pretty children's party given by Mrs. George Bornehann at her home on Harrison street in honor of her daughter, Doris Bornehann. The home was bravely decorated with holiday effects and a radiant Christmas tree loaded with gifts delighted the merry young people. An excellent program of songs, games, and instrumental music was given and a stereopticon closed the entertainment, given so successfully.

Mrs. Bornehann was assisted in entertaining her little guests by Mrs. Alfred von der Ropp, Miss Ethel Middleton, Mrs. William Ernest Miles, Mrs. William Watt, Mrs. Frank Rising, Mrs. Harry P. Carlson, Mrs. Richard Bahls, Mrs. Frederick Dallam, Mrs. Seth Mann, Mrs. Gustav Hergert. The children who enjoyed the afternoon were Doris Bornehann, Mignon Wilson, Gladys Wilson, Dorothy Taft, Secreta Taylor, Helen Carlton, Ellis and Dorothy Miles from Portland, Beth Parcel, Leslie Miller, Elizabeth Yates, Grace Rising, Florence and Robert Duncan, Dorothy Taylor, Edith Marjorie Ames, Beretta Fisher, Dorothy Mann, Vera von der Ropp, Harold von der Ropp, Marjorie Waldron, Welwyn Dallam, Marion Collins, Monroe Allen, Elsie Hergert, Ruth Crockett, Blossom Turner.

NETTLETON GOLDEN WEDDING.

The golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Nettleton, which took place New Year's day, at the residence of their daughter, Mrs. Alice M. Erickstad, at 121 Ninth avenue, was a most interesting and enjoyable affair.

The house was artistically decorated with smilax and chrysanthemums. The happy principals received valuable presents and a dainty supper was served.

Mrs. S. L. Darling read an original poem, written by her to commemorate the pleasant occasion. The poem is given herewith:

AFTER FIFTY YEARS.
Over and over the lover
Sings in a musical rhyme,
Old as the very beginning,
New as each moment of time,
Songs full of peace and of plenty,
Songs of the sheltered and fed,
Songs full of reverent gladness,
Songs of the happily wed.

Often, too often, the story
First in the wonderful word,
First in the song of creation,
First which the ear over heard,
Ends in a wailing of sorrow,
Drowned in a passion of tears,
Or with a weary persistence,
Waits the fruition of years.

Rare is the masterly serial
Wrought to a beautiful plan,
Married by no fault or erasure
Since the sweet chapter began;
Yet my dear friends, the Great Author
Loves his volumes so well,
Surely there cometh a sequel,
Here or hereafter to tell,
More of that marvelous story—
Planned when the heavens were new,
Drawn from the soul of Jehovah,
True as creation is true.

Yearly the leaves have been gathered
Into the book of the past;
Half of a century's pictures—
Latest but never the last—
Lie in your hands like a treasure
Bound in a binding of gold;
"For," saith the Lord of the Records,
"There is a story well told."

L'AMITE SEWING CIRCLE.

A very pleasant gathering of young people watched the old year out and the new year in. Miss Amy Coder was the hostess of the evening, and she entertained her friends at the large Corcoran residence on Oak street.

She and her young girl friends who make up L'Amite Sewing Circle entertained a number of their men friends at a party given at the Corcoran residence. The house was very beautifully decorated with greens and Christmas berries. Supper was served at 12 o'clock and the name cards were dainty New Year favors.

CORWIN-THOMAS WEDDING.

The marriage of Miss Edith Corwin and Wendell C. Thomas, which took place Monday afternoon at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Everett Corwin, 1018 Wood street, was a pretty and interesting ceremony.

The Rev. S. R. Wood, pastor of the Plymouth Avenue Church, was the officiating clergyman, and the bride and groom stood beneath two beautiful floral bells. The parlor was superbly decorated, the dominant scheme being an artistic arrangement of holiday berries and green foliage.

The dining-room, where the wedding supper was served, was ornate with a clever festooning of American flags. The reception which followed the ceremony was attended by a throng of society folk who overwhelmed the happy bride and groom with congratulations.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas have gone on an extensive honeymoon tour of Southern California and will afterwards reside in this city.

The bride has lived in this city for many years and received her education in the schools here. She is an accomplished musician and has been a popular member of the younger set.

The groom is a commercial traveler for one of the leading firms in San Francisco.

He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Mark A. Thomas of 556 Thirty-second street.

OAKLAND CARMEN'S BALL.

The Oakland Carmen's Association will give their annual ball at Reed's Hall on the evening of February 12 and from the present outlook the affair will eclipse anything ever attempted by that organization before.

The decorations will be shown in a way to make the guests at the ball believe they are in fairy-land as thousands of multi-hued electric lights will be used and will be implanted in emblems of green foliage.

The ball is intended to outshine in brilliance any affair ever given in Athenian society and promises to mark an era in large functions in this city.

The committee at work on the ball is composed of the following named: W. E. Watkins, J. W. Smith, Charles Clark, Barney Hanley, William Wilcox, Samuel Longwell and B. B. Booth.

ATHENIAN MAID ENGAGED.

The engagement has been announced of Miss Eda Hesse of this city and Herman Kattenhorn of San Francisco.

The wedding date has not as yet been decided but will probably occur during early spring.

Miss Hesse is well known in Athenian society circles, where she is a popular and esteemed member.

Mr. Kattenhorn is a young business man of San Francisco, where he has a host of friends.

THE BUTTERS HOLIDAY EVENING.

The event of the holiday season in Oakland society circles was the radiant New Year's eve entertainment at the Butters' mansion in Piedmont.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Butters build well when they planned the affair, as it was one of the most enjoyable and novel functions ever seen anywhere. The delighted guests were of one opinion—that it could not have been more successful.

The center of interest was the large dining-room, which had been arranged to represent a German music garden. At one end of the room a stage had been erected, and on this a dramatic representation of the old year's passing was personified by characters, whose action and lines were written by the gifted host, Mr. Henry A. Butters.

The scenes shown were a series of living, breathing pictures. Mr. Butters enacted the role of the relentless patriarch, Father Time, and 1901 was in the capable hands of Henry A. Butters Jr.

The new year was personated by Mr. W. B. Hopkins, who, dressed as an infant, created a perfect storm of incessant merriment.

Mrs. Howard Bray, as the nurse, was excellent, her rendition of the part being marked by much cleverness.

At midnight a German supper was served by young society buds, dressed as peasant girls. The bizarre supper was enjoyed in the hall, where guests had all the appearance of a Teutonic lunch house.

The menu is given herewith:
Potato salad, German style.
Cold boiled ham, Piedmont acorns.
Cold pressed corn beef, Alsatia.
Hot frankfurters and sauerkraut, ice packing.
Metwurst salami sausage, Miltiskin's brand.

Vienna rolls, McNear's patent process Coffee, in cups.
Mosselle subfrawuit, in moderation.
Lager beer, ad lib.

A stringed orchestra rendered music during the evening, and before parting the words "Good night" were sung by those present, the words were sung by those present, and set to a popular air.

Mrs. Butters was assisted in receiving her guests by Mrs. R. Augustus Bray, Mrs. Alfred Cohen, Mrs. George W. McNear Jr., Mrs. Clarence Williams, Mrs. Charles H. Cooke, Mrs. William Hopkins, and by the Misses Bertha Young, Bessie Palmer, Ella Goodall, May Young Elsie Marmel, the Misses Pauline and Lora Fore.

Among the guests at the evening were Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Regua, General and Mrs. Oscar P. Long, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Regua, Mrs. and Mrs. George E. Wheaton, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Whitcomb, Mr. and Mrs. A. Booth, Mr. and Mrs. Brantley, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Cohen, Mr. and Mrs. R. Augustus Bray, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Bray, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Prather, Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Clay, Mr. and Mrs. L. Stephens, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Tucker, Mr. and Mrs. Will Magee, Mrs. F. M. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. ### THE LAYMANE PARTY.

East Oakland was the center for numerous parties last Tuesday night to bid farewell to the old year and welcome the new. The new palatial home of Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Laymanne at 556 Fifth avenue was ablaze with electricity.

In the home were gathered a host of friends of Ada Laymanne. This young hostess was ably assisted in receiving her many friends by her mother, whose charming manner made all the guests feel perfectly at home. The merry folks tripped the light fantastic to the delight of all. At a late hour the dancing closed. A delicious repast was then served to the guests at which every one was presented with a horn with which the old year was to be rooted into oblivion. Mrs. Laymanne had the rooms decorated with Christmas berries, which were quite appropriate.

At midnight the horns were heard in full blast, a fitting climax to this happy party. Miss Laymanne's guests were the following: Miss Hazel Daly, Mildred King, Rachael Newson, Myrtle Lougher, Ethel Thornton, Doris Grayson, Ethel Mott, Kate Van Dusen, Marian Sumner, Jenny Morgan, Minnie Stroud, George Daniels, Miss Hartley, Miss Pratt, Miss Ruth Staper, Miss Alma Kaiser, Miss Blanche Laymanne, Leslie Hayes, Will Wells, Earle Burpee, Janice Morgan, Ed Stephens, Lode Rice, Harry Gray, Belden McKike, Lowell Redfield, George Thompson, Cecil Graham, Sidney Mott, Esmond Smith, Louis Stewart, Lloyd Hughes, Wilson Carter and Vernon Irwin.

EVENING AT HOME.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Alken of Oakland gave to their daughters, the Misses Emelle and Pearl, at their residence, 1115 West street, an evening at home. The house was most elaborately decorated, the colors being red and green. A large number of guests were present. A most delightful evening was spent in various games and dancing. At midnight light refreshments were served.

A CHRISTMAS PARTY.

Miss Agnes Christen tendered a Christmas party to the Fortnightly Progressive Whist Club at her home, 1672 Ninth street, on December 27, 1901. The house was tastefully decorated with holly and huckleberry. The favors of the evening were bon-bons. The prizes were awarded to Miss Emma Nesfield and D. Mahoney, both of San Francisco. Those present were: The Misses Mae Horgan, Louise White, Minnie Christen, Mary Harrington, Nonie Mangano, Eleanor Mangano, Sophia Llespie, Catherine Canty, Mae Summers, Agnes Bodkin, Emma Nesfield, Lottie Reed and Agnes Christen. The Messrs. Edw. Smith, Thos. Gardner, Wm. Crossman, Acton Haven, D. Mahoney, Chas. Gibson, Earle Waterman P. Pay, Wm. Bercovic, Joe Priel, D. Parker, Geo. Austin, Chas. Summers and Geo. Wagner.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Miss Sophia Llespie, Piedmont.

A NEW YEAR'S RECEPTION.

The parties given by the young folks of the social set on New Year's Day were numerous and full of enjoyment furnished by soirees on such occasions. Among those who delightfully entertained were Miss Husted and Miss Winifred Husted, at their home on Oak street. These young ladies made charming hostesses and received over a hundred and fifty guests between the hours of 2 and 11. Tea and light refreshments were served; the guests in the afternoon, and during the evening the guests indulged in dancing until a late hour. Miss Winifred Husted rendered many vocal solos, which added immensely to the pleasure of her friends. The home was beautifully decorated with flowers arranged in a dainty way by the hostesses. It is needless to say this was one of the largest and most enjoyable gatherings of the day.

Old Soldier's Experience.

M. M. Austin, a Civil War veteran of Winchester, Ind., writes: "My wife was sick a long time in spite of good doctor's treatment, but was wisely cured by Dr. King's New Life Pills, which worked wonders for her health." Impairment of hearing robs one of many of the joys of life, exposes to danger, interferes with capacity for usefulness, limits ability to transact business and earn a living. Many annually abandon their plans, ambitions and hopes on account of loss of hearing.

In nearly every case of partial or complete deafness there is another feature that to many is more troublesome than the difficulty of hearing—the distracting head noises. These make such an impression on some as to almost drive them in sane. The everlasting buzzing, ringing, snoring, rumble or roar, distracts them by day and prevents rest at night.

Nine cases out of ten of head noises and progressive hardness of hearing are due to catarrh of the middle ear, or of the tube leading from it to the throat.

It should be understood and constantly borne in mind that to restore the hearing and silence the distracting noises a treatment is required that will attack inflammation in the eustachian tubes, reduce the congestion and swelling and stop the secretion of mucus so that the tubes will be open to the middle ear, and were quite hard of hearing. In both cases the corner's jury decided that they came to their death because of inability to hear.

head signals that were intended for them. What happened to them is of frequent occurrence and in three cases out of four might have been prevented by the use of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets. These tablets cure all kinds of catarrh. They can be bought at any drug store for 50 cents a box.

The Stuart's Catarrh Tablets do effectively cure catarrh of the eustachian tubes and the head noises and deafness resulting therefrom is attested by the following:

"Mr. Jane Barlow, the famous madiste, said: 'I finally had to give up personal attention to my customers, and in consequence many of them went elsewhere. I was in despair, for specialists seemed powerless to help me. Stuart's Catarrh Tablets cured me in just a little while so completely that now I hear as well as ever.'"

Army Surgeon C. S. Beverly became so deaf from catarrh that he was forced to resign his position and abandon his profession. He says: "Of course my inherent professional prejudice was hard to overcome but knowing of the great benefit you had received, my dear General, through the use of Stuart's Catarrh Tablets, I used them. The great and almost immediate relief I experienced was truly astonishing. I am now entirely cured and have no fear of the disease returning. I go back to my old post next month."

Two acquaintances of the writer were run down and killed by the cars in one year. Both had catarrh of the head, which had extended up the eustachian tubes, leading from the throat to the middle ear, and were quite hard of hearing. In both cases the corner's jury decided that they came to their death because of inability to hear.

Wano, July 8th, 1885.
My Darling: It seems almost an age since I parted with you in front of the express office. Wish I could see you tonight. Do you miss me, I wonder? Hopkins starts before tomorrow. When he returns, I shall try and get off so as to run down and see you. I am like a bear who has had a taste of honey and is wild for more. Dear heart, you little know what happiness you brought me! I have felt your warm breath on my cheek and seen your eyes look love back to mine, a thing I hardly dared hope for, let alone expect. Please don't think this foolish, but credit it to where it belongs—yourself. I have not seen Inez since you went away, neither have I caught a glimpse of Nellie. Saw your father at the post-office last night, but he did not look so awfully forbidding, indeed he didn't! Spent quite a portion of the day with an old friend of mine from Colorado—Henry Leslie, at present secretary of state for the silver commonwealth. He is a splendid fellow, even if he is a Republican. He and his wife have been to Yosemite, and are returning to their home in Denver. Mrs. Leslie is a fussy, plump little woman—a regular brick with no nonsense about her. I wish you could meet her, for she is one of the kind who, while being thoroughly womanly, have plenty of snap and courage.

ON THE LAKE.
Mr. Simpson is still here. Last evening he took a party of friends up to the lake on a picnic excursion. I saw the complexion of the party and concluded I would enjoy myself better by staying at home and writing to you. The Harpers, Corwins, Turners, Soderers and the like compose the party—good folks all, but scarcely congenial to Teddy. No, not too much of that sort of thing for Ted. The weather is too warm and the talk rather trying. How did you stand the trip down?
Just got back. Edna Harris and Nellie Stone poked their heads through the window and I went out and kissed them and escorted them to church. They were going to prayer meeting. Beale had been eating onions—Lord! phew! It's terrible to get "took" that way. What nonsense I'm writing! My dear, I would not write you such things if I were not sure you understood me and comprehended just how much such actions on my part mean. It may be a month before I meet either or both these girls that way, and it might be several months before I would commit any such nonsense as I've just recounted.

My dear, I know you must have nearly roasted on your way to San Francisco. It was fearfully hot here all day Monday, and I know the heat must have been melting between Wano and Sacramento.
Wish I knew how you felt when you got down, and what you think of me for disregarding your injunction not to come and see you off.
Really, I couldn't help it.
The sight of your dear face has been such an inspiration to me that I could not forgo the last chance your visit afforded me.
Pardon me, won't you?
What has the "good, awfully nice young clerk" to say about "rustic admirers"? I'm aching to know.
Goodnight, darling, and remember your true and loving,
TEDDY.

INEZ JEALOUS.
Wano, July 10th, 1885.
My darling: It seems that a friendly person who does me a friendly act where you are concerned must be punished for it. I met Inez the other evening after I had mailed my letter to you, and she asked me not to join her on the street any more, because she had been made the subject of malicious gossip in connection with you and my meetings.
A certain class of persons in this town seem determined to make you and my affairs a matter for public concern, and are as busy talking and "Oh, Mrs. Leslie, as bees around an upset hive; and indeed they are a deal nastier and more malicious than bees.
What these creatures hope to gain or what they have to subserv beyond the mere love of scandal mongering and tale-bearing is one of the things Lord Dunsany says "no fellow can find out."

I'm not particularly savage as a rule, but I do wish some of the busy-bodies had their wagging tongues cut out.
I saw Jennie L. today. She is going to Blue Gulch with Mrs. Morris Monday. Like a sensible girl, she talked freely with me about certain matters, and informed me that a number of parties had been telling her that I had ill-treated her. She said she afterwards, knew I liked you, and did not think I acted strangely at all, though she was somewhat mortified that people should take up the idea that I stood on any other footing with her than as a friend.
Of course I told her nothing about your and my affairs. That would hardly have been proper, but I was glad, since there has been so much talk, to speak to her candidly about the gossip which your visit set floating around.
I told you before that I had never given her cause to think of me other than as a friend.
It is true we had a mild sort of flirtation, but it was of a very colorless type, and was of that laughing character which bears the impress of hollow-ness.
From what Inez told me, I became really afraid that she had become attached to me, but I find that my vanity had led me to take counsel of my fears without cause.
But enough of this.
Did you get my letter? I did not know whether I had the number right or not, and I did not wish to inquire.

GAVE UP THE LETTERS.
As I gave you back all the letters from San Francisco, I was without the address.
Ah me! It gives me a pang every time I think of parting with those letters.
What a solace and comfort they were to me in my hours of sadness.
Dear, I hope their possession will afford me as much pleasure as they gave me.

SINCE you went away, I have felt little like work, thinking of you all the while, but I am going to buckle down to it in earnest, now that I have an incentive to urge me on.
Ah, love! how bright is the future when illuminated with the glow of hope!
It seems so strange, yet withal so natural, for one to have such power over another, as you have over me. The earthly attractions of mere matter?
Why the eager longing that has no trace of passionate gratification?
I leave this problem for a wiser head than mine.
I only know that I love and that my love rules my life without volition of my own.
It is a sentiment that has become ingrained in my nature, and subordinates all else to its influence.
I trust you have fully recovered from the effects of your hot and tiresome ride and that you find the city pleasant.
I wish I could see you tonight.
I shall soon.
Hope you are getting well on with your dramatic readings, and that your success will be equal to your deserts.
Good-night, and God bless you, darling, is the prayer of TEDDY.

PLEASURE OF STAGING.
San Francisco, July 11th, 1885.
My dear Teddy: Yes, I received your letters, the first you wrote after I left Wano, and the second also, as you will perceive by the contents of this.
Hot and tiresome drive?
Nothing if the sort.
If there's a thing in the wide world I love its staging.
The way Donnell handles the ribbons and whip, and the way those four white horses have of cantering down hill and flying around narrow curves in the road is most exhilarating, and the smell of the buck-eye close along the road, with those scarred mountains beyond and the river winding like a lithe white thread in the gorge below—all divinely outlined through the blue haze of the morning, is a sight for the gods!
I sat up on the top of the stage. If you remember, you engaged the seat for me, and had a great time holding on when the horses went on a rattling pace down the river hill.
After we reached Jackson and had breakfast, I sat inside.
Opposite me was Wells, Fargo's Messenger, with his loaded shotgun across his knees and by his side sat Father Murphy, the Catholic priest from Wano. He knows you and mentioned your name to me. By the twinkle in his eye, I opine he is not above a joke.
The rest of the seats were occupied by Eastern tourists just returning from trips to the big trees and Yosemite. They were all big, fat and good-natured, and kept craning their necks for the stage robber who never appeared. He would have had a good haul that morning if he had come to light, for the treasure box upon which my feet rested was heavily laden with gold from the mines.

ON HER HUSBAND'S SHOULDER.
The old lady opposite evidently took me for a child, and kept insisting that I must be tired, and "didn't I want to rest my head on her husband's shoulder and go to sleep?" Husband was a red-faced, portly individual with rolls of fat around his neck, who entered no objections to the project, and only looked mildly surprised when I hastily thanked her and refused. Father Murphy seemed to get a good bit of fun out of the situation by the expression on his face, and after we got on the cars at Sacramento, came to me and asked me if the old folks weren't really very kind.
You see, I commenced answering the last part of your letter first.
As to the rest, we will consider the episode relating to Jennie L. closed. I haven't any objections to your being on friendly terms with her, but shouldn't want you to be so attentive as to cause gossip. You know I am a great believer in Platonic friendship. Tongues will wag, whatever one does, and if my visit to Wano has given people something to talk about, I suppose I am, in a mild sort of way, their benefactor.
Of course its very kind of Inez to take such an interest in our affairs, but don't you think she might stand by her colors?
I suppose you have been enjoying yourself playing billiards and cards since my departure, although that little incident concerning the two girls who were so indignant as to look at you through the window would seem to indicate that you had also fallen a victim to other fascinations. It is very good of you indeed to intimate that I am so entirely acquainted with your characteristics, but really I wasn't aware that indiscriminate kissing was one of them, and I don't believe that I am broad minded enough to regard it with equanimity. How, for instance, would you like me to be doing that sort of thing? I fancy not a whit! No more do I, even though you were frank enough to tell me about it.

BACK TO WORK.
I am very much surprised that you think of coming to San Francisco so soon, and pleased, of course.
I have not yet gotten over the excitement of my visit, and have had to take hold of work at the office in earnest since my return. I forgot to tell you that when I reached Martinez I put my head out of the car window and took a long deep breath of salt air. It seemed heavenly, after the hot, scorching air of the plains.
And San Francisco—all light and color, bustle, noise and confusion. It appeals to me very much as does the stage ride, only, of course, in a very different manner.
The one seems to bring out a buoyancy and elasticity of spirits and all that is best in one—the other arouses a fierce desire and ambition—for what? I hardly know.
Here I am as a stranger in a strange land,—with few friends or kin here, yet I do not feel lonely,—only an intense desire to mingle with and be one of the throng.

MORIBD ABOUT GOSSIP.
Aren't you just a trifle morbid about the gossips? I can't see how my visit home could have given people much to talk about. I didn't bring any fashionable clothes with me—possibly because I don't own any, and except for the few times I went riding or walking with you, I stayed very quietly within doors. Oh, I forgot that banquet political lights gave Tom Prescott of Sacramento, which you and I attended together under the protecting wing of Mrs. G.—Do you suppose the fact of our being there caused speculation and wonder? Well, a fig care I!

By the way, I want to tell you that last night, on my way home, I saw a fortune teller's sign hanging up in front of a rather shabby looking house and on the impulse of the moment I went in and had her tell my fate by the cards, but I'm not going to tell you one word she said. Of course I don't believe in any such nonsense, and went in more for a lark than anything else. I am going to say good by now, and pray you take good care of yourself.
LOLA.

SUNDAY IN WANO.
WANO, July 19, 1885. My Darling: It is a beautiful Sabbath morning. A fresh breeze is blowing. The sun shines bright. The birds are caroling in the trees around the court house and the air is full of the fragrance of flowers. Ah, the bells are just beginning to toll for church, calling people to the shrine of "Him who taketh away the sins of the world." But this little world of Wano is a godless one, and few will sit under the shadow of the pulpit today. A dog fight will draw a larger congregation here than the most eloquent preacher, and the comic songs of a street singer are far more interesting than the solemn strains and stately measure of the psalms of David. This is typical of the intellectual life of this community, which bustles itself with gossip about its neighbors and the small concerns of a colorless, every day life.

It may sound strange for me, who am entirely unreligious, to speak thus of church going, or rather, non-church going, but I merely look at the question from the standpoint of a critic who judges the moral and mental status of a people by their acts. But what matters such things to a philosopher?
You know I used to set myself up as a sort of prototype of the boy who herded sheep and ate turnips—the little fellow we used to read about when we went to school, but a change of hats one memorable evening knocked that out of me, and has transformed my selfish indifference, falsely termed philosophy, into a keen, sentient interest in everything human.
Philosophy may be a fine thing in theory, but it would be difficult to imagine a more dreary, heartless, listless and unenterprising world than one inhabited only by philosophers. One quick, hearty human impulse is worth a century of philosophy. I have set my young friend of the sheep and turnip patch down as a fraud.
I know you are wondering what all this is about, and really, it is about nothing; it is the preface of nothing, and in nothing it ends. I've merely been letting my vagrant ideas run along idly like a mill wheel on Sunday. Jennie Hill's voice has just lifted itself up in a "Methody" hymn, and the birds chirping in the locust trees are stopping to listen. Jennie sings with both hands and feet—no small matter, I tell you, and what she lacks in rhythm she makes up in volume.

A LOVER'S MUSING.
Dear, I went out walking yesterday evening and strolled out to where we stood under the trees, watching your home as it lay against the hills bathed in the glistening moonshine, and listening for the home-coming of your father who hates me for the crime of loving his daughter.
The setting sun had left a golden glow on the western sky and the shadows of twilight softened the rude outline of the circling hills, so that they looked like huge mounds of neutral color.
I leaned against the fence and thought of the meeting we had then.
I stood and dreamed a life dream in one brief day dream, and woke to find my cigar out and darkness shutting the landscape from sight.
As I turned regretfully to walk away I heard the click of your father's gate and then the sound of your mother's voice, clear and distinct, came through the gathering darkness to my ear.
How near it sounded, and how it turned my thoughts afresh to you and the times we sat by the door beguiling each other with skeptical commentations on the mythical passion of love.
Then I went to the office and sat for an hour in the darkness. My reflections seemed to fill the dusty old place with your presence, and I veritably believe I should not have been startled if the shadows had spoken to me with your voice.
Ah, the man who wrote "tis better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all" knew what he was talking about; he had felt that tender dreamy sentiment which makes a man almost childish, while ennobling his nature and making him live only in the happiness of the beloved.
Do I weary you in talking about these things? Perhaps. But the optimism of love must vent its bubble, even though it be stale and flat like the uncorked wine after the feast.
I'm sorry, very sorry, to have been the cause of my getting into hot water at home. She has been so kind and obliging in her good offices.
So you have been patronizing a fortune teller! Well, you failed to give me a description of the man you are to marry. Is he middle-aged, about six feet tall, of dark complexion, and a dimple in his chin? I know such a one if he'll suit.
I cannot tell you any further about my visit to the city, but it will not be longer than three weeks. If things do turn out happily, as I've reason to believe they will, what a joyful mortal I will be. If you find no news in this letter console yourself with the thought that there is none to write. I am overjoyed to have you write to me, and hope to hear from you at an early date.
Lovingly,
TEDDY.

P. S. Of course I received your letter last night and this is in response. I am happy, love, when you are good to me.
TED.

FASHION and FADS for the WOMEN

Let us sing about the good times in the valleys on the hills.
The music of the mocking birds—the joy of all the hills;
Let us see in all the winters, where the snow lies chill and deep,
The red that yearns to blossom where the flowers are safe in sleep.

Let us sing about the good times; they are bright on plain and slope,
And all the world is ringing with the silvery bells of Hope;
The blue skies bend above us—the grass is green and sweet,
And the violets spread a carpet for the falling of Love's feet.

Let us sing about the good times; they are coming right along,
And all the world is sweeter for their halcyon song;
And not for Love and living—for no blessing Love denies.

And life's a sweet thanksgiving to the glad and answering skies!
—Frank L. Stanton, in Atlanta Constitution.

TAILOR-MADE GOWN.
The tailor-made gown is the only suitable one for a business woman to wear, and is almost universally adopted by them. It gives a ting air to the wearer which nothing else can. The up to date woman of business would no more wear frills and fold-decorals while on duty than would a man. However, occasionally in an office or store one finds young women dressed as for an afternoon tea rather than for the stern duties confronting them, but in such cases the offender is usually young and inexperienced. The store girls are the worst offenders against good taste, but it may be that their surroundings can be urged as an excuse. It is certainly natural for the girl at the ribbon counter to want to wear tempting bargains around her neck, and also for those at other counters to want to adorn themselves with the numerous pretty things bought by other women, regardless of the total unsuitability to the wear and tear of every day life. The girl who stays at home and has nothing to do but entertain friends and have a good time is the one who could and should indulge in pretty feminine fripperies, but women engaged in business of whatever kind should be models of neat, plain dressing, in which flashy colors are avoided.

BATH GOWNS
The favorite bath gowns of today are made of heavy double-faced Turkish and picturesque they are, the more becoming. The particular muff in question which has set the fad, is of two rows of black chiffon, puffed, and the casings and puffs at each side, also of chiffon, over white silk. Three rows of beautiful, full white ostrich plumes, at least a quarter of a yard long, hang over the other, are the feature of this pretty creation. The feathers are natural, and not much curled, just turned up at the tips. The fad now is to wear these muffs, made of black chiffon and feathers, or in white, blue, pink, corn-color or red, to correspond with a visiting gown.

It is not the smart thing for a girl to give a marriage or engagement ring to her husband or fiancé, at least, not in this country, but it is very much a fad to give a man an engagement key, as a gage d'amour. It would not be fair to tell the name of the young woman who has started the fad of the engagement key out of her own little brain. Since she was a girl of fifteen she has worn, hanging from a simple gold chain, a small gold key, which she has always called "the key to her heart." She has just become engaged, and the "key to her heart" having been claimed, is now worn on the watch chain of her fiancé, and will always be worn by him, as the gage d'amour.

SOME OLD STYLES
A writer in the Woman's Home Companion says that at a recent exhibition of curios was shown something odd in the way of scrap books. It was begun some twenty-five years ago, and contains samples of dresses worn by its originator during that quarter of a century.
Alongside of these for the past fourteen years have been pasted pieces of the clothes worn by a daughter, for whom the book is now intended. By the time this daughter is a woman grown she will possess the record of fabrics of two generations, and even more, for the first entries in the book are scraps of the grandmother's wedding outfit. Among the last named are soft all-wool goods spun and woven at home, with here and there a silk thread intermingled, from home-raised silk worms. The regular yearly entries began some twenty years ago with the mother's wedding dresses, and the pages tell the changes wrought in fabric and style. Many scraps are also accompanied by pictures cut from fashion magazines.

The book is the ordinary large-sized scrap book, and the pasted entries are of varying shapes and sizes. On some of the pages are samples of clothes worn by contemporaries such as the party dresses of a beloved aunt or the velvet redingote of a distant relative. The personal entries for the daughter begin with the dainty lawns, laces, embroideries and cashmeres of her baby days, along with a tiny pink silk sock and a photograph of a bald-headed infant. Then follow the dimities and fine ginghams of the first short clothes and the ribbon-bound flannel sacks in colors, along with the velvet-ens and plushes of cloaks and hoods. Accompanying one scrap of embroidery and lawn was a line saying it was the last long dress worn before donning the shorter outfit. Opposite all these pages are samples of the dresses and wraps worn by the mother at this time. The book contains also many pieces of chintz and cretonne used in the household, among them the wild rose design of the saten hangings of the baby bed and the nursery window curtains. Here and there are photographs and also locks of hair cut from time to time, which show as plainly as the dates the flight of years. The change was from gray to white in the hair of the grandmother, from brown to gray in that of the mother, and from pale sunshine to dark brown in the locks of the daughter. It breathes the atmosphere of domestic love.

THE FERVONIERE.
According to the Ledger the fervoniere is undoubtedly coming back to favor. Forty years ago no one would have needed to be told what a fervoniere was, and many of the ornaments are in the possession of women lucky enough to have inherited jewels.
The old fashioned fervoniere was a forehead jewel, usually a large uncut gem set in heavy gold work. It was worn in the center of the forehead, attached to a gold fillet, or, more often, a band of black velvet which passed around the head.
The ornament was marvelously becoming to a certain classical type of face, but lamentably disfiguring to the ordinary woman. The Empress Josephine was particularly fond of the fervoniere, which became her, although her face was far from classic.
The uncovered foreheads of recent seasons opened the way for a revival of this old fashion, and the jeweled stars and crescents which were worn low against the forehead with the parted fringe of hair hinted at the fervoniere; but now a number of Parisian beauties have taken up the old mode in earnest, and have appeared with splendid jewels gleaming upon their white foreheads just above their brows.

The velvet band and fillet have not appeared, the modern fervoniere being as nearly as possible devoid of visible setting, and held in its place by the finest thread of gold or a string of small pearls. The fashion is, of course, extreme, but it has appealed to the Parisian's love of novelty, and the French jewelers have innumerable orders for the new ornament, while old fervonieres are being taken from jewel cases and reset according to the modern taste.

"Mamma, when you sneeze a sneeze where does it go to?"
"It goes into the air, I suppose, dear."
"And when something scares it away and you don't sneeze it where does it go?"
"I don't know child, don't bother me."
"Does it go back to where it came from, mamma?"
"Oh, I suppose so. Run out and play."
"Then you've got to sneeze it some time, haven't you?"
"Likely as not."
"If you were to sneeze all the sneezes you had on hand would you ever sneeze any more, or would there be new sneezes to—"
"Willie, I wish you would let me alone."
"What keeps the sneeze from coming out when it starts?"
"How do I know?"
"Why is it, mamma, that some people say 'k-choo' when they sneeze and some say 'k-chee'?"
"Willie, if you don't—"
"Johnny Dickon says if I'll give him five cents he'll sneeze through his ears. Can he do it, mamma?"
"No, of course not, dear."
"How do you know he can't?"
"Because—Willie if you don't stop bothering me I shall certainly—"
"Mamma, what is a sneeze?"
"Whack! Whack!—Chicago Tribune.

Eugene Field used to tell a story of his meeting with Mrs. Humphry Ward. It was at a dinner in London, given by Henry James. Field was delegated to take the celebrated novelist down to dinner. She looked at him with frigid eyes and touched his arm with a frightened fashion. When safely ensconced at the dinner table, she turned to Field and drawled:
"Tell me, please, something of the habits and customs of Chicago. I never have seen a native Chicagoan before."
"Well, returned Field, his face as solemn as an Egyptian mummy's, "when they caught me I was living in a tree.—Rochester Post Express.

with marmalade, press together and serve.

NUTS AND RAISIN SANDWICHES.
English walnuts, layer raisins, graham bread, butter. Use equal quantities of nuts and raisins. Stone the raisins and chop together with the nuts. Use between thin slices of graham bread and butter.

Another nice sandwich is made of one-fourth pound butter, one neufchâtel cheese, two dozen baby olives, one-half bunch water cress, salt and cayenne pepper. Cream the butter, and cheese, salt and pepper and stir till well mixed and smooth. Chop the olives and water cress till quite fine, add to the butter and cheese and use a generous layer of the mixture between thin slices of bread.

A favorite sandwich is made by chopping cold boiled ham and a few pickles together and seasoning well with French mustard. It is very delicious put between thin layers of bread and is a great appetizer.

Pump and drain one quart of large oysters, and let them become cold; mix four tablespoonfuls of chopped mushrooms (they should be fresh, clean and uncooked), add one-tablespoonful minced fine and one table spoonful of minced parsley; add this to one half cupful of thick brown sauce made with butter, flour and oyster liquor, salt and pepper, and cook until the mushrooms are tender and the entire mass is quite thick, then let it cool. Of course, these may be all in readiness hours before the real mering begins. Then plaster one oyster with the mixture, put another on top of it sandwich fashion, and fasten the two with tiny wooden skewers, or better yet, silver ones. I don't like to call them toothpicks, as the suggestion is not fastidious; broil them quickly, put on a hot plate, dust as quickly with a butter, salt and pepper, and serve with a few slices of choice bacon that is one else has broiled.

Take small link, New York sausage, split them lengthwise and broil on both sides. When they are cool, lay on thin slices of buttered whole-wheat bread and white lettuce leaves. Cover with a slice of thin-buttered white bread. Serve cucumber pickles with these sandwiches.

Chopped olives mixed with mayonnaise, spread on brown bread, make a tempting sandwich for five o'clock tea.

WELSH SANDWICHES.
Rub together two parts of soft, mild cheese and one part of butter; flavor with mustard and an herb vinegar, and spread between thin slices of bread, cut in diamond shapes.
